

Easy Munthiri Koothu Recipe / Mundhiri Kothu / Traditional Diwali Sweet

Easy Munthiri Koothu Recipe / Mundhirikothu / Green gram jaggery balls is a healthy, traditional south Indian Diwali sweet particularly famous in kanyakumari, tirunelveli and kerala. They are made with green moong dal, jaggery and coconut for inner filling, rice flour batter for outer covering. This sweet is very similar to another South Indian delicacy called suzhiyam (sugiyam), where cooked channa dal is used and they are soft in texture when you bite. But here in this recipe, roasted green dal is used for filling and it is little hard in texture and when you bite, they are really tasty. I never knew about this sweet and tasted before, when I was talking to my father the other day, he told that his grandma used to make mundiri kothu for diwali. I asked my father, is it made with cashews (mundiri) ? He told it was made with green gram dal. I am not sure about the true meaning of munthirikoothu eventhough it is not made with cashews, so when I did google search, many says it means bunch of grapes in malayalam. Since this sweet is famous in tirunelveli district too, I asked one of my tirunelveli friend Ranjitha for Mundhirikothu recipe, she asked her mom and got the recipe for me. Thank you Ranjitha. You can make this mundirikothu during festival time like diwali or as evening tea time snack.
